| Brief Description      | Very popular Top Forty band that played on a stage outlined with a brass bed. It was a band managed and promoted by the South Georgia music magnate Johnny Bee. The Strange Bedfellows released a cover of "Mother's Little Helper" that was on its way to charting until the Rolling Stones, the song's creators, decided to release it as a single.. |                              |                          |                                                                                                                                                         |
